The Circulation of the Bulletin.

The Bulletin has the largest circulation of any paper in Eastern Connecticut, and from three to four times larger than that of any in Norwich. It is delivered to over 3,000 of the 4,053 houses in Norwich, and read by ninety-three per cent. of the people. In Windham it is delivered to over 900 houses in Putnam and Danielson to over 1,100, and in all of these places it is considered the local daily.

Eastern Connecticut has forty-nine towns, one hundred and sixty-five post office districts and forty-one rural free delivery routes. The Bulletin is sold in every town and on all of the R. F. D. routes in Eastern Connecticut.

GOVERNOR WEEKS.

Governor Weeks need not be disturbed by the technical work which the legal sharks of today are spinning about the duties of a governor, salary and other matters of importance to the man who under such sad and trying circumstances has been called to assume the duties of chief magistrate. He is not the first to be thus advanced and there is no record that his predecessors in office under like circumstances did not have the full confidence of the people or receive all the emoluments and honors which belong to the office.

Lieut.-Governor Weeks is recognized by The Bulletin as a worthy and competent successor of the late Gov. George Leavens. The announcement is made that he stands for the reforms which were dear to his predecessor's heart, and that he will do what he can to protect and promote the interests of the people as well as to carefully guard every industrial interest in the state.

Governor Weeks will receive prompt recognition from the friends of his predecessor in this part of the state and active from their hearty support in his endeavor to carry to completion the work which Governor Leavens left unfinished.

He has the reputation of being a man of sound business judgment and rare personal charm and great courtesy, and has the faculty of making and keeping warm friends.

DEER IN NEW ENGLAND.
It has been stated that there were 100,000 deer in Maine, but when the fish and game commissioner of Vermont estimates the number in that state to be 100,000 it is a somewhat startling fact.

The Rutland News remarks upon this statement that "these figures are just as good as figures of one-tenth of this number, because the estimate is doubtless the merest conjecture. We doubt, however, if the average resident of Vermont would place the number anywhere near as large as 100,000. A more conservative estimate would be 10,000, but there is absolutely no way of substantiating any estimate whatever."

It is barely possible that there may be 100,000 deer in all the other New England states outside of Maine, but this figure is surely open to doubt. The Bulletin knows that Massachusetts and Connecticut have enough deer to create a furor among the landholders claiming damages for these protected creatures, but Rhode Island does not appear as yet to have entered the complaining class.

The deer issue is certainly getting to be more and more of a problem all of the time.

DENVER, THE REMARKABLE.
Denver is the most remarkable city in the far west because it does things upon such an elaborate scale. In the ten years preceding the last census it made, in consequence of its persistent booming, the greatest advance of any American city. It did not become so when it had achieved this distinction, but went on building itself a great auditorium that it might become a leading convention city, and now in this spring of 1909 the authorities are distributing to the people 20,000 maple and elm trees to be distributed among property holders for the purpose of beautifying the streets of the city and when the time arrived for giving them out, the crowds gathered early at the three stations, bringing all manner of conveniences, and every tree found eager hands prepared to plant and make it a thing of beauty.

They have civic pride there and inspiring leaders who are bent upon making Denver not only great in population and industry, but attractive as any city in the country. Denver is regarded as an example by many aspiring cities, and it deserves the recognition it is receiving in all parts of the country.

The English woman who has come over here to teach the American girl to shorten her stride, will find that she cannot keep up with her with the stride shortened.

Since it has been decided that the pearl in an oyster or an oyster sand, which belongs to the one who finds it, there are no more lawsuits in the case.

Fashion is pretty aggressive when it forces women to dye false hair to make their hats look right.

TOO MANY BANQUETS.

It was his stomach not his will that prevented Richard Croker from attending a farewell banquet from the Democratic club of New York. Mr. Croker said he was out of politics for all time, but that not his digestion prevented him from attending the banquet. The boys have been too good to me, and my digestion bids fair to suffer.

As an evidence of good fellowship the banquet in and will be popular with all but those who have reached a point in the game of life where the banquet has become a recognized foe, if not a peril, and the middle-aged and old men, unless they fall victims to appetite and die before their time. Richard Croker is not right at all the time but he has a warning stomach and takes heed and in this he is wise. Men of advanced years cannot afford to be careless about their diet.

TUBERCULOSIS LEGISLATION.
One of our friends who are zealous in the anti-tuberculosis work are so much in earnest that they overlook the dangers of fool legislation. We most heartily approve and encourage all rational efforts to conquer the dread disease, but we must not hastily decide to sanction unwise legislation. The name of contagion control and health protection. Freak legislation will inevitably retard progress by arousing resentment and bringing into ridicule the necessary measures that have merit and reason in them. The anti-spitting bill that the legislature passed and then killed was a case in point. Had that particular monstrosity become a law it would have been a source of incalculable injury to the cause and the laws that are needed in the fight against tuberculosis—Bristol Press.

Very true, very true. We do not find the doctors themselves agreeing upon these things. Dr. S. B. Mun of Waterbury, writing of tuberculosis, said: "The idea that people can contract tuberculosis from sputum on the street is without foundation. In fact, for when it is sufficiently dried to float in the air, it has become thoroughly disinfected by oxygen, and is perfectly harmless."

Ferried legislators often pass freak legislation, but the people must refuse to get perturbed over disease, for if they observe the laws of health they are in little danger.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

President Taft recognizes baseball as the national game, if golf is his favorite.

King Peter's offer to abdicate the Serbian throne for $20,000 shows that the royal price is not so very large.

The Illinois legislature has ventured upon the judiciary of that state. It is safe to bet that they cannot do it.

Now that the Chicago city hall is to have an usher, it is explained that this is an entirely different thing from a stenographer.

So Mrs. Taft is to visit Norwich with the president. We are going to have the whole administration "in our midst."

Judge Landis of Chicago recently filed a man one cent. He was not in fact connected with the Standard Oil company.

Brud may be dear, but from the quantity of money upon the spring, it is evident that money is not scarce.

When the Turks break loose and commence business there appears to be no doubt in our mind that they were born butchers.

Happy thought for today: The expert fisherman who knows right about his line does not always catch his fish.

The time may come when Connecticut like some other states will give the legislature just ninety days to do their business in.

These high April winds strain the hatpins and make the fashionable women look as if they wished Old Boreas would stop pulling.

The Sultan cannot be charged with having neglected his prayers, for he went regardless of the armed character of his enemies.

The legislature loafs on its job till the people get tired and then it gets to working twelve hours a day and tiring itself all out.

Most men would find Mombasa a fine place to get lost in, but Roosevelt has just got the eyes of all nations turned that way.

If the undertakers really had all the "grandmother's funerals" of the base-bul season their business would be more driving than ever.

Oh, Women, Woman!
Mrs. Scott, the administration candidate for queen of the D. A. R., was elected by eight votes, and they do say that the voting was so delayed by management that the New York delegation kept back till last, had to break up to go to dinner engagements, and all New York was against Mrs. Scott. They also say that Mrs. Scott, who is past 70, is only put in to pass the time away until the technical inability of the delegates to elect a queen, and she disappears through the intervention of a year, and some people claim that she is to be distributed among property holders for the purpose of beautifying the streets of the city and when the time arrived for giving them out, the crowds gathered early at the three stations, bringing all manner of conveniences, and every tree found eager hands prepared to plant and make it a thing of beauty.

Very True.
President Elliot condemns the two branch city government as obsolete, and a way which favors corruption—Norwich Bulletin.

Any government will favor corruption under the rule of corruptible men and there is no surety against corruption but honest individual character. No system will save or sanctify any government without that—Bridgewater Standard.

THE BULLETIN'S DAILY STORY

GOOD ADVICE.

"I don't see you passing with that girl of yours any more," said the cigar dealer as the slim young man carefully selected three stogies from the box.

"What girl?" asked the customer, suspiciously.

"Oh, never mind that," countered the tobaccoist. "Don't you suppose I was next to you? Why, there was hardly an evening I didn't see you two floating past here until a month or two ago. That big girl—black hair and—and all that," he concluded lamely.

"Oh, her?" said the young man, as though a knock of light had been let in on the subject. "No, I haven't gone by here with her lately. I didn't suppose you'd notice it, though."

"Noted it?" said the cigar man. "Well, I should say so. She was a swell looker, too. No trouble, I hope?"

"The slim young man regarded the burning end of his stogie critically, but seemed disinclined to discuss the subject."

"Oh, yes," he said shortly. "No trouble. What made you think that?"

"Well, when I see a nice looking young fellow follow that breaking girl with a swell looking girl," he explained, "I naturally think there must have been a row. Foolish, my boy, foolish!"

"I don't know," said the young man. "There's nothing like it—take it from me. I wouldn't live single for a million dollars."

"Is that so?" asked the customer with a faint show of interest. "I didn't know you were married. You're around here?"

"My business does keep me here pretty steady," admitted the cigar man. "I wouldn't give up my little home for anything. I don't know what's getting the matter with the young fellows nowadays—they all come out here and want to be married. It's because everything has gone up so much."

"It cost a lot more to keep house than it did fifteen years ago," he remarked. "The slim young man, putting his elbows on the cigar box, said: 'What's the difference?' demanded."

"The strain too great."

The death of Governor Lilly, while not a surprise, came nevertheless as a great shock. Even his political opponents had hoped that he would reach the age of 80.

All admitted the pluckiness of his fight against adverse conditions, both in Washington and Connecticut. But his frailties of human mind and body could not withstand it. The Courant says:

How far his political ambition might have carried him we can only guess; what we know is that he killed him. The city of it—Bridgewater Farmer.

The State the Poorer.
Governor Lilly was in the prime of life, a typically energetic and square Connecticut business man, who, having reaped a fair reward for his ability and industry in trade, was turning a higher and nobler ambition into action and success in that field, and promised to win more. His death is a sad loss to his family and friends, not to the state, for he was the poorest in able and helpful citizenship by the passing of Governor Lilly—Stamford Advertiser.

Summenced to the Inevitable.
Few men have made a stronger fight against greater odds than did the man who Wednesday evening laid down his burden and succumbed to the inevitable.

Governor Lilly's honorable enemies, and they were not a few, will regret as they do his friends his untimely death. He did not have a chance to "make good" in the position which he had labored and to which he was entitled by the publication of his honorable enemies. It is not necessary to remark that he takes any comfort out of the present situation they have hearts entirely lacking in these qualities which go toward making human beings human—Meriden Record.

Mighty Readable Recollections.
Is Norwich playing fair? She seems to be getting more than her share of good things. And not the least of these good things is George Bromley's recollections, the publication of which began in The Bulletin on Saturday under the caption "The Long Ago and the Later On, an Experience of Eighty Years of Life."

Having read the first installment, we are prepared to say in the expressive diction of a brother editor, "It's bully." It is evident that the late Isaac Bromley, who won fame as a terse and able writer, had not lost all of his literary ability in the family. Reminiscences are not rare, but there is a rarey delightful charm, a humor and a frankness about these recollections that makes them mighty readable. The readers of The Bulletin are in luck—Bristol Press.

Kansas Has the Gout.
This theory that the banishment of the nation has "crippled" Kansas financially is not entirely correct. That slight halt in the gait of Kansas is due to gout, superinduced by too much prosperity—Kansas City Times.

Needs No Instruction.
We see that an English woman has come here to teach the American girl to shorten her stride. The American girl is always willing to learn, but she gets there just the same—New York Herald.

Words Fall Him.
The lady editor of the Clarksville Advertiser calls "em" "waste basket hats." The weather man calls "em" "coal scuttle lids." We don't call 'em—Gainesville Herald.

Is Broad Gauged.
The president and vice president attended a Washington baseball game yesterday. This is not to be excluded as a golf administration—New York World.

Almost Unbelievable.
And to think this is the same Castro who once threatened to invade the United States with the entire Venezuelan militia—Washington Herald.

The Prospect.
And yet the prospects are that after the turmoil and fever and things have settled down again Turkey will be merely Turkey—Indianapolis News.

Wickersham's Development.
Don John Wickersham is rapidly establishing a Russian censorship in the department of justice—Washington Post.

The Farmer's Chance.
It looks as if the quickest way to get rich were to raise a few hundred bushels of wheat—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Fair Haven.—John W. Kessel, secretary of the state league of carpet bowling teams of the Royal Arcanum council of this state, states the board has not decided upon the game between a way from Eastern and South Norwalk teams would be held. This game is to settle the winners in the finals for the trophy.

Mrs. Martha Gilbert Dickinson Bianchi has written a story of Monte Carlo as seen from the inside, which is to be published under the title of "The Cuckoo's Nest." Mrs. Bianchi has taken a house and lived at Monte Carlo and her book is full of the atmosphere of the place. She is a niece of the poet Emily Dickinson and her first book was called "A Modern Prometheus."

What the Papers Say.

From Mrs. Troup.
Among the hundreds of tenderly sympathetic telegrams sent to Mrs. George L. Lilly is one from Mrs. Alexander Troup of this city, as follows:

New Haven, April 22.
Ours is a common sorrow. Accept our heartfelt sympathy. If of any service, command us.

The late governor held the late Mr. Troup and Mrs. Troup's family in very high regard.

He was deeply grieved over Mr. Troup's untimely death and he and Mrs. Lilly did all within their power for the afflicted family.

Now Mrs. Lilly and Mrs. Troup are sisters in sorrow, their chief comfort being the tender regard which all men feel for the memory of those who are gone.

The whole state mourns with those who mourn—New Haven Leader.

Thomas Rudolph is still a practicing lawyer and local judge at the age of 90 in Shippensburg, Pa. He was recently nominated for his judicial position by the democrats, and so popular was he that no candidate was put up against him by the republicans. If he finishes his term he will be 99 years old.

Edward North Benson, a well known Philadelphian and former president of the Union League club, died at the age of 69. He was a private soldier in the Civil war and after it was over became a major in the National guard of Pennsylvania. He had gathered a notably fine collection of works of art and gave several valuable things to the Union League club.

Mrs. Lucy E. Peabody of Denver has just received her appointment as deputy registrar of the Colorado state board of land commissioners. Mrs. Peabody is widely known through her efforts to have the cliff dwellings in southwestern Colorado preserved by including them in Mesa Verde National Park.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and it is a local disease and is supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from one drop to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.
When It Is Free of Dandruff, It Grows Luxuriantly.
Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally, luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Hairdressing. It is absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs. It always itching intensely; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 7c. in stamps for sample to The Herpelde Co., Detroit, Mich.
